back to articles

Gaza and the "boiling frog" syndrome

Palestine Gaza Israel

Published: July 11, 2025

Everyone knows the story of the boiling frog — a scientific experiment from the 19th century by German physiologist Friedrich Goltz. In it, a frog placed in gradually heated water doesn't jump out, even as the temperature rises fatally. But drop it into boiling water? It jumps to survive. The lesson: slow change kills without resistance.

or even convinced that the water is fine — right up until the moment it burns us alive.

Nowhere is this clearer than in Gaza.

Nowhere is this clearer than in Gaza.

It began in the mid-20th century, when Ashkenazi migrants — mainly from Europe and the Soviet Union — were moved into Palestine, following World War II. With full backing from the UK and US, and tacit historical complicity from Germany and Italy, they declared the so-called "State of Israel" in 1948.

But this wasn't just independence — it was the dispossession of another people. Over 700,000 Palestinians were expelled in the catastrophe known as the Nakba. But the world adjusted. The frog stayed in the water.

Then came 1967 — Israel took Gaza, the West Bank, and East Jerusalem in a single stroke. Then came settlements. Blockades. Bombings. Generations of children in Gaza were raised without clean water, free movement, or even the right to dream.

Still, the world didn't jump.

And now — in plain view — the final phase is here.

Entire city blocks flattened.

Hospitals and schools bombed.

Children murdered in the open.

And world leaders? Either complicit — or silent.

This isn't war. It's an experiment in how far the world will go without jumping.

Some countries — like Saudi Arabia, the UAE, or India — believe they can pay their way out of this boiling pot. They normalize ties, sign deals, and whisper that it's "not their problem." But appeasing an ideology of supremacy and conquest doesn't buy safety. It just buys time — for others to boil first.

And Europe?

Remember, Brexit didn't happen for no reason.

The continent is being split, weakened, distracted. The Ashke Nazi supremacy project — seeded during the Tehran Conference in 1943, where the UK, US, and Soviet Union carved up the world — never envisioned Europe as part of its core. Europe was a battlefield. A pawn. Now it's a market — no more.

Gaza is not just a tragedy. It's a warning.

If we don't jump now, the fire will rise — and no one will be left untouched.

Silence isn't neutral.

It's the sound of boiling.

If you liked the article, feel free to share it with your friends, family, or colleagues. You can also follow me on Medium or LinkedIn.

Copyright & Disclaimer

- All content provided on this article is for informational and educational purposes only. The author makes no representations as to the accuracy or completeness of any information on this site or found by following any link on this site.
- All the content is copyrighted, except the assets and content I have referenced to other people's work, and may not be reproduced on other websites, blogs, or social media. You are not allowed to reproduce, summarize to create derivative work, or use any content from this website under your name. This includes creating a similar article or summary based on AI/GenAI. For educational purposes, you may refer to parts of the content, and only refer, but you must provide a link back to the original article on this website. This is allowed only if your content is less than 10% similar to the original article.
- While every care has been taken to ensure the accuracy of the content of this website, I make no representation as to the accuracy, correctness, or fitness for any purpose of the site content, nor do I accept any liability for loss or damage (including consequential loss or damage), however, caused, which may be incurred by any person or organization from reliance on or use of information on this site.
- The contents of this article should not be construed as legal advice.
- Opinions are my own and not the views of my employer.
- English is not my mother-tongue language, so even though I try my best to express myself correctly, there might be a chance of miscommunication.
- Links or references to other websites, including the use of information from 3rd-parties, are provided for the benefit of people who use this website. I am not responsible for the accuracy of the content on the websites that I have put a link to and I do not endorse any of those organizations or their contents.
- If you have any queries or if you believe any information on this article is inaccurate, or if you think any of the assets used in this article are in violation of copyright, please contact me and let me know.